A DREAM COMES TRUE FOR JOYCE COPPING

by Rachel Senechal

One night, Joyce Copping dreamed in living color. She dreamed that she was in the most beautiful flower garden that she'd ever seen. The colors were so bright - red, yellow, orange, pink, purple, green - that she thought, "This must be what heaven looks like." Surely nothing on earth could be this beautiful. A couple of days later Joyce received a call from her son Jay, a landscaper living in Utah at the time. "Mom, I'm coming home and building a rock garden for you on the hill in front of the house." That was the genesis of Joyce's striking flower gardens at her home on VT 14 about a mile and a half north of the Village. Joyce and Jay collected rocks, purchased perennials and planted flowers with tender loving care to create that first garden.

Over the years, the garden has grown by leaps and bounds. One day Jay came to visit while his father was away on a trip. Jay found his mother digging up sod for a new garden. Joyce had seen a picture of a circular garden divided in quarters and wanted to replicate it in her yard. Realizing that it could take days for his mother to turn the sod by hand, Jay used the roto-tiller and accomplished the task in no time.

Last summer, Joyce told her husband Clayton that she wanted to fill in the swimming pool and make a pond with a fountain. The first two liners leaked, but so far the third liner works. It takes a lot of hard work to build a pond three times! Joyce gazes at her lovely fountain from an old-fashioned swing in her side yard.

Joyce and Clayton moved into their home in 1962.

They have four children: Jay, Robin, Heather and Lori. Many people know Robin and Jay as members of the East Montpelier Fast Squad. Heather lives in Montpelier and Lori in Duxbury. Joyce and Clayton have one grandchild - a good looking boy with a smiling face.

As motorists drive by the Copping home, their eyes feast on an array of colors, shapes and textures. The garden's beauty is irresistible. A New York couple spied the garden as they drove by and promptly did a U-turn on busy VT 14 to drive up to the house and photograph Joyce's "heaven on earth." Since Joyce and Clayton are friendly people, they didn't mind the unannounced visit by this couple. Joyce is proud of her gardens and wants passersby to enjoy them.

Joyce has another passion that keeps her hands busy and reveals another facet of her creativity. She has been a quilter for about 20 years and quilts every day. "Quilting is a nice pastime. It's relaxing and peaceful. I go into my own little world." Currently, Joyce is making a baby quilt that features angels in the center blocks. Joyce loves angels as evidenced throughout her house. Recently, Joyce worked with Lincoln House residents (of Barre) on a queen size quilt. Several red work blocks were embroidered by women of Lincoln House, and Joyce put them together to make a beautiful quilt. Joyce also made a prototype prayer lap quilt for the Old Brick Church. Church members are considering making lap quilts to give to people who are sick or injured. Joyce is generous in sharing her quilting talents.

Joyce and Clayton enjoy traveling in their RV. A few years ago they took a memorable trip to Alaska. At night they snuggled under quilts Joyce made specially for the RV. They're planning several trips this year both in Vermont and out of state. It's hard to believe that Joyce has time to work part-time as a registered nurse at Gifford Hospital or as a teacher of CPR classes.

Top of the Signpost

"All in good season." "The season's the reason." "Seasons come, seasons go." We have so many expressions about the seasons, but my favorite is the idea that Vermont has a fifth season, Mud Season. And in some years it is truly a season apart from the other four. But on this last day of March, Mud Season hardly exists thanks to the light winter and gradual spring. Another of Nature's tricks!

How would it be if we rearranged the seasons? I think that April 1 should be celebrated as New Year's Day, not January 1. April brings new beginnings in so many ways. Do you know any month that sees more changes in the landscape? Our back field today is a solid sheet of snow, but by the end of April there will be onions, potatoes and peas sprouting in the garden. It is the start of a new year for growing things — wildflowers, bulbs and perennials. The sap rises in the trees, and the maples yield some of it in the annual spring ritual of sugaring. Animals on the farm and in the wild are having babies. The tax listers have even chosen April 1 as the time to start visiting us. It's surely New Year's Day for them. (Historians and genealogists may observe that in 1752, the Gregorian Calendar replaced the Julian in the British colonies. The earlier calendar was patterned by the natural flow of the seasons and started the new year at the spring solstice.)

It's funny to consider how we define seasons. We call the months of June, July and August summer, and we know that it will be hot (well, hot for Vermont anyway). Australians and others living in the Southern Hemisphere find these same months to be cold. Our summer is their winter. Then there is Costa Rica, with an entirely different definition of the seasons. I was there in January and February and found the school children enjoying their "summer vacation." They name those "winter months" summer because they enjoy the best weather of the year, the dry season. When the rains come, it is winter. It's all in your definition.

Wherever we live on this planet, I expect that humans and wild creatures alike feel a great sense of expectation when the earth wakes up from its sleep to start a new cycle of birth and growth. That time is now - enjoy it!

Jean Cate

As Spring approaches, Joyce is itching to put her fingers in the dirt. She and Clayton are awaiting the return of their bluebirds, hummingbirds and a bunting that visited for the first time last year. Joyce loves all of her perennials, but some of her favorites are irises, clematis and the ever-cheerful evening primrose. She's eager to see their blossoms again.

As I left Joyce and Clayton's house, I was invited back to visit when the flowers are in bloom. I also noticed Jay's signature blue spruce in the yard. His business is called Blue Spruce Landscaping. Joyce, I'm happy that your dream came true!

NEW ACTIVITIES

REVOLVING LOAN FUND COMMITTEE

David A. Coburn, Chair

Our town has received two grants from the Vermont Community Development Program (VCDP); one for a loan of $218,000 to Fairmont Farms for improvements to their dairy facilities, one for a loan of $318,900 to the owners of Sandy Pines Mobile Home Park for improvements to the park. Repayments from the loans come back to the Town and will be used to capitalize the East Montpelier Revolving Loan Fund (EMRLF).

Under the policies of the VCDP, the Town is allowed to use up to 20% of the loan repayment for eligible program management and general administration costs. After being reduced by these costs, the income is subject to an annual assessment of 25% to be paid to the State for reuse in the VCDP. The remaining funds will total about $712,566 over the life of the two loans.

The Town may use these funds to make loans or grants available for eligible activities, including public facilities, public services, housing rehabilitation, or economic development. They must be used to benefit low and moderate income persons in the Town.

The Selectboard created a management committee in April, 2001, to be responsible for the operation of the loan fund, appointing Bruce Bjornlund, David Coburn, Ed Deegan, David Grundy, and Paul Manghi. Coburn is the Chair and Bjornlund the Clerk. The committee will have authority to set priorities, determine loan terms and conditions and approve loans and grants. It is to establish internal policies and guidelines for the EMRLF. The committee is now working on a series of policies which, when adopted, will provide a framework within which the funds can be used to best serve the interests of the Town.

A survey was distributed at Town Meeting to see what uses town residents thought should have the highest priority. The results of the survey showed economic development and housing rehabilitation as the preferred use of the funds. In addition, several very thoughtful comments were received. Our thanks to all who contributed.

The committee meets on the second Wednesday of each month at 6:30 in the Town Office. All are welcome. For further information, call Marlene Betit, Town Administrator (223-3313).

WEC PURSUES RENEWABLE ENERGY SOURCES

Avram Patt, WEC General Manager

In November, Congressman Bernie Sanders announced that he had secured a $1 million grant to allow Washington Electric Co-op to develop a wind generation site in the Central Vermont area. This will enable WEC to meet three objectives for new energy supply established by our board of directors a year ago. As we look for power supply to replace existing contracts or to meet demand caused by growth in our membership, we want those sources to be renewable, affordable, and when possible, close to home.

WEC serves over 9,000 member homes and businesses in 41 towns in Washington, Orange and Caledonia counties. Although we own and operate the hydroelectric station at the Wrightsville dam, that supplies only a small fraction of our members' needs. Most of the electricity we supply is purchased wholesale through long and short-term contracts. Vermont Yankee, our largest source and about a third of our supply, ends in 2002. Looking into replacement sources, we realized that some renewable sources could be available to us at lower than expected cost if we were willing to make long-term commitments and play a role in actually developing them. This would also give us something else we were looking for: price stability and predictability.

Renewable sources are fast becoming a significant source of electricity. In other parts of the country and the world, wind, solar and methane gas from landfills and farms are no longer seen as experimental and pie-in-the sky. Washington Electric Co-op has in fact already secured a three-year contract for landfill methane gas generation at market prices, and is working on a longer-term project from landfill gas as well.

New England has not seen much wind generation development yet. But in the upper Midwest and Texas, it is one of the fastest growing and most economical new energy sources. The technology has improved significantly. Wind energy in Vermont is still a bit more costly than other sources, but that cost is coming down. Preliminary research shows that there are a number of locations throughout Vermont with high wind potential. The Searsburg facility in southern Vermont, owned by Green Mountain Power, is showing that the technology works, and that this type of facility can be welcomed as a part of the landscape.

Over the next several months, WEC will still be in the planning stages of our project. When Congressman Sanders announced the grant, we began receiving calls and emails from Co-op members and others suggesting potential sites. We are not quite there yet, but later in 2002, we expect to start working with wind measurement experts to screen sites, including some already being considered by private wind energy developers. Hopefully, within a year we will have selected a site and some development partners. We will begin the process of getting regulatory approval, and then building a wind energy "farm" in our area. We know that WEC members and Vermonters in general want to support renewable energy. At the same time, wind energy facilities are visible additions to our landscape. The Co-op is enthusiastic about the project and will work with property owners and communities to find a site that is acceptable, welcome and affordable to our members.

E. MONTPELIER HISTORICAL SOCIETY

At the March meeting of the East Montpelier Historical Society, Anne Ormsbee presented an interesting talk on the history of 4-H in our town. She has written the following to give us a taste of the clubs:

4-H clubs have long had a place in East Montpelier life. One of the earliest clubs in town, organized in 1921, was the "Hustlers Community Crop and Canning Club," a County Road group with about 15 members. Members won prizes for several years with their canning achievements, with Marion Fitch fulfilling her 100 quart goal at age 11 by putting up 121 quarts of food.

Other early clubs were the "Happy Cacklers" of the County Road, the "Four Corner Daily Cacklers," (whose motto was "an egg a day makes a hen pay"), the "Good Luck Sewing Club" of North Montpelier, "The North Montpelier Handicrafters" and, a bit later, the "Center Girls 4-H Club" and "The 100% 4-H Club."

Sound like fun? The Historical Society meets the third Monday of each month at the Four Corners School.

COLLECTION OF HAZARDOUS HOUSEHOLD WASTE STARTING

Start gathering up all your spent fluorescent bulbs, old oil-based paint and lawn and garden pesticides! The Central Vermont Solid Waste Management District's seasonal hazardous waste collections are scheduled for May through October, and this year we're holding two mid-week collections in addition to Saturday collections. Please note the schedule is a bit different this year. Mark your calendar!

2002 Collections

- Saturdays: May 11, June 8, September 14, October 12
- Wednesdays: June 19, August 21
- Hours: 9 - 10 am for CEG's (that's "Conditionally Exempted Generator" —small business, in English) appointment required; 10 am to 1 pm for households
- Location: CV Transfer Station on US 2 in East Montpelier
Call the district office at 229-9383 for CEG appointments, disposal costs and more information.

GREEN UP DAY IS COMING ON MAY 4TH

A single ski, a sofa, an old TV, 40 automobile tires, these were among the items collected from the roadsides of our town on Green Up Day last year. The total inventory included an additional ton of bagged trash and several hundred pounds of recyclable containers. It was an impressive sight to see it all gathered together at the Elementary School last May for hauling. Even more impressive was the sense of mission and satisfaction among the 70 plus volunteers of all ages who made it happen.

Just as it's safe to expect that our snow will be gone by Green Up Day again this year, it's also assured that there will be the need to get out and clean up the roadsides of our town. Here's how you can take part:

- Plan in advance to clean up an area or roadside near your home.
- Contact the Green Up coordinator to check on needs and to state your commitment.
- Obtain Green Up disposal bags at the Town Clerk's office or the Elementary School.
- Speak to your neighbors about joining you on Green Up.
- Come out and participate on May 4th, rain or shine. Bring your collected trash to the Elementary School.

We have 63 miles of non-state roads in East Montpelier. Last year, over one half of those roads were cleaned up by friends and neighbors on Green Up Day. This year our goals are to green up more of our roadsides and involve more volunteers.

Maybe we'll even find that other ski!

Contact Green Up Coordinator Bill Merrylees at 223-4951 or e-mail bmerry@together.net.

NORTH MONTPELIER'S RIVERBEND STORE REVISITED

by Alban Richey

Tucked away in East Montpelier's northeast corner, at the junction of VT 14 and 214, the Riverbend Store has, since September 23 of 1999, taken on a new life under the ownership of Maurice and Sue Cerutti. In its present transformation, this local landmark is much more than a convenient place to pick up that loaf of bread or gallon of milk you just ran out of. If it's a cup of coffee you need to take on the road, you have a choice of six kinds including an organic fair-traded brand, all freshly brewed to go along with the muffins, fresh-baked daily. Are you looking for a greeting card that reflects the Vermont milieu or one that expresses your sentiments in good taste? Seven different brands of cards are attractively displayed. Need a made-in-Vermont gift? In the post-Revolutionary gift shop, with its wide-board floor, you'll find a pleasing mix of wind-chimes, painted glass, dipped candles, baskets, puzzles, goat's milk lotions and much more. The Riverbend still houses a U.S. Post Office (zip 05666)—112 boxes are rented—and serves as a Vermont wild game reporting station and sells hunting and fishing licenses (as well as lottery tickets). But it's the expanded groceries inventory and the variety of new items carried that are bringing back old customers and making lots of new ones.

Just as the store has undergone a transformation, so have the lives of the new owners. When the previous owners, Bob and Karen VanZandt, announced they were putting the business up for sale, Maurice and Sue Cerutti saw it as their chance to make a move. Maurice (Mo) had dreamed of someday owning a business and being self-employed. Having reached 36 years of service as a technician with the State Agency of Transportation, he was ready for a change. Sue continued working at her job as office manager and bookkeeper for a Montpelier firm, leaving that job behind in May of 2000 to join the staff of the store. Both knew they were in for long hours and a steep learning curve, but their wide experience in dealing with people gave them confidence in their ability to serve their customers. Mo has an active interest in family and local history and is a member of the Green Mountain Barbershop Chorus. Sue has served as general manager and treasurer of the Vermont Philharmonic, and currently serves as treasurer for the Barre Players and is producer of many shows. Both are Board members of the Barre Players.

Before buying the store, the Ceruttis and their two children still with them occupied Mo's grandmother Wheeler's house near the "singing bridge." Out of the nest are three others plus five grandchildren. Now they have vacated their family homestead to take up residence in the apartment over the store, the better to keep an eye on things and to generate supplemental income from the rental of their home—a measure of financial safety, given the vagaries of business. Sue cites a case in point: anticipating a brisk tourist business last fall, she had ordered a generous supply of sweatshirts, T-shirts and hats with Vermont logos. The attacks of September 11 seriously hurt tourist business everywhere; that inventory will have to be sold at a significant discount. But there are other lines, especially groceries, that provide a solid base of revenue.

Before filling my cup of Superior coffee to take on the road (decaffeinated with a shot of "high test"), I poked my nose into as many corners and displays as possible thinking I might find an item I needed and that would translate into Riverbend revenue. Sure enough, there was a display of Swiss Army knives (I'm always losing mine). On the bottom shelf in the groceries was a gallon of wine vinegar (goes into a recipe for salad dressing). Over a display of stuffed animals and toys was a case of hand-crafted earrings (my granddaughters' birthdays are coming up). Remember the Zippo cigarette lighter? You can still get one here. Nothing on TV tonight? You'll find choices galore in the video and DVD rentals section. If, like the writer, you have a craving for Manghi's breads or you need beer or wine for a special occasion, you'll find a wide selection at the Riverbend.

But, what are the satisfactions (and the headaches) that have come with ownership of the business? Mo is quick to answer. "Daily interaction with customers brings the greatest satisfaction." The biggest challenge? "Balancing the concern for serving the customers' needs with developing a trusted staff and honest suppliers. Managing a store that's responsive to the customers' needs means you need to trust your employees and your suppliers to have the store's best interests at heart," Mo asserts. Sue adds, "We're very fortunate to have competent employees we can trust and who are liked by the customers."

Future goals? By September of 2002 (their third anniversary) the Ceruttis expect to have doubled the sales from what they were when they took over. Their positive attitude and bountiful energy bodes well for the future success of the business. Undeniably these new owners have made a significant contribution to the quality of life and the economy of North Montpelier.
