Dean Shattuck, Newly Retired

Dean Shattuck's father told him many years ago not to keep a job if he didn't like it. Dean took his advice to heart. He started work at the Washington Electric Co-op in May of 1947 and retired forty-eight years later, on September 1, 1995. He says it was always interesting and enjoyable work and always challenging.

Dean Shattuck was born and brought up in Lynn, Massachusetts. In 1943 he entered the Army, saw action in the European theater, and two and a half years later was honorably discharged just as he was about to be transferred to Burma.

Dean's father had graduated from Norwich and Dean enrolled at the same college. He studied electrical engineering which helped him in his later work. In time his money ran out and he started work for the Co-op, first in the field and then in the office where his skills in electrical engineering were useful.

While not a Vermonter by birth, Dean had early ties to Vermont. His maternal grandparents were from Roxbury. His grandfather tended the horses at Norwich and his mother grew up loving to ride and became an expert horsewoman. Dean also enjoys horseback riding and for three or four years kept two horses.

Dean is married to Susan Morse, daughter of Harry and Dorothy Morse. In 1965 Susan and Dean were offered a piece of land by Susan's grandparents, Sidney and Mildred Morse. They became one of the five families now living in the Morse complex. For the first couple of years the only way to get to their home in the wintertime was by snowmobile, since the old road broke up easily. The town fathers were reluctant to improve the road, but were finally convinced after seeing a vehicle impressively sink.

Dean and Susan have two birth children: a son, Peter, who is studying in Barre to become a licensed electrician, and a daughter, Kim, who lives in New York City and is expecting her first child. They also adopted two Vietnamese children.

Dean is obviously proud of all four of their children. He told me about the adoption of Jacob, now a student at Champlain College, and Nan, living in Worcester and planning to be married.

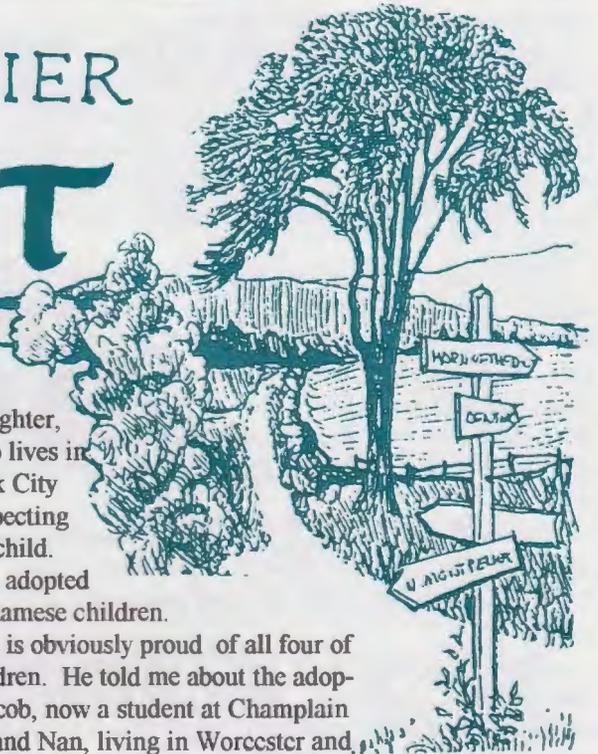

Peter and Kimberly were young children when Dean and Susan met someone who had adopted Korean children. They decided they would like to adopt also, feeling there were many children in the world needing love and care.

After investigation they found a woman in Montreal who had adopted nine children. Licensed in Canada, she acted as liaison to Vietnam to facilitate the adoption of Vietnamese children, many with a GI parent. She was able to arrange for the adoption of Jacob when he was two years old.

Shortly after, the Shattucks were asked to adopt an eleven-pound six-month old girl, Nan, and after much thought did so. Both children had health problems when they arrived but soon were well, and became an integral part of the Shattuck family.

Dean is an avid down-hill skier and in the past taught skiing at Sugarbush, some at Stowe, and taught his children, now all proficient skiers. For two years in the late 60s he taught skiing to a class of thirty to forty from the East Montpelier Elementary School. He helped build three small ski areas with rope tows: in South Barre, on the Morse complex and in Waitsfield.

For twenty-five years Susan and Dean have spent some time in Maine in their camper at Sebago Lake. Susan went to the same lake when she was growing up. There are twenty-five to thirty people who return to the lake every summer, from New Jersey, New York and New England. The Shattucks look forward to seeing these friends each year.

Retirement brought a big trip—to Alaska. This two-week vacation saw them fly to Seattle and to Fairbanks, taking a train to Anchorage. A bus took them on an eighty-mile trip through Denali Park with its six million acres and many animals. The second week was spent on a ship where they visited glaciers. Dean had a helicopter ride to the top of a glacier, got out and walked around.

Dean enjoys working on old cars. He now has a 1973 Volkswagen "thing." I learned that the "thing" was manufactured in 1972 and 1973 as Germany's answer to a jeep. For three or four years Susan and Dean have had a mixed breed dog, "Augie", who was found in a culvert down the road, obviously abused. With much love and TLC became a part of the family. Augie loves to sit in the "thing" and waits for Susan to take him for a ride.

Susan Shattuck works in the office at Washington County Mental Health Children's Services. According to Dean, she's a fast and accurate typist who also does some work at home for clients.

Dean was a lister for the town for five years. During that time he, Steve Sinclair and Bradford Lane developed a town mapping system and completed a reappraisal. The mapping was very helpful in determining property boundary lines, and with the reappraisal some people found they owned more—or less—acreage than they had thought.

Asked if he is enjoying retirement, Dean said he's busy. He is still doing some consultant work for the Co-op. Insurance coverage had been one of his responsibilities and his help is needed in renewing coverage. Last year he negotiated a new health coverage plan. During his tenure at Washington Electric Co-op Dean had many responsibilities. He has seen the Co-op's service territory go from predominately farms to primarily residential, including vacation homes. His jobs have included billing, analyzing and forecasting power needs, and developing power needs. He was instrumental in bringing data processing into use at the Co-op.

Dean was honored to receive the Governor George D. Aiken Award from the New England Association of Electric Cooperatives in 1989, for "meritorious achievement in the rural electric power industry and for exemplifying the ideals and practices of George D. Aiken."

On August 3 last summer 110 people—retirees, employees and family—gathered at Lague Inns for a surprise retirement party. In talking about his years at the Co-op Dean said, "It's been a real pleasure." It's a real pleasure to talk with you, Dean, and we hope many more people will now come to know you.

Top of the Signpost:

I never thought I'd live to see the day! If you have ever exploded these words either in exasperation or in awe, you will understand my amazement that the world could have changed so much and so fast. I am speaking of the Signpost and how it is a symbol of the huge changes taking place in the world of communication. Here's what is happening.

In September 1990 you received your first issue of the Signpost. To create it the contributors each wrote out their offerings - some on typewriters, some by hand on yellow pads of paper. Janice Waterman gathered them all together to deliver to Fred Tubbs, who entered them into his computer. In standard form. Fred passed them along to Cherie Staples, who converted them to the shapes you are used to seeing in the paper and laid them out attractively. Drawings and photographs were added, and only then were the "mechanicals" ready for L. Brown and Sons to print.

And now, six years later? Most of our authors create their pieces on computers, though we don't require it. They can e-mail them directly either to Kevin Wood or our new design/layout person, Loring Starr, or they can deliver them to Margaret Richey who herself e-mails them to the designer. Janet MacLeod's drawings are being scanned onto disks so they can be instantly transferred to the computer screen. ("Cut and paste" hardly means what it used to!) The pieces are now all on screen, ready to be laid out on their proper pages. That is how we have moved into the 21st century.

Oh, how staff meetings have changed. New terms — like file compression, attaching files to messages, ink-jet vs. laser printer — are exchanged between the more computer-literate among us, while the rest of us are getting an amazing education. What's next? Well, it is possible to eliminate the paper-mechanical step altogether and send the final manuscript directly to the printer. The tricky part is the photographs. Long-range (maybe not so long at that) is sending the Signpost directly to anyone with e-mail capability. And how about an East Montpelier "home page" on the Internet?

Awesome it is, but regardless of this electronic wizardry, the Signpost still hasn't changed one whit in its commitment to keeping everyone in East Montpelier in touch with what's happening. Thank you for supporting us so well!

EAST MONTPELIER FIRE DEPARTMENT

Chief Jonathan Winston, President Michael Bliss

With 1995 at an end and 1996 starting, it is time to reflect back on the activities of the East Montpelier Fire Department. In 1995 the department responded to 189 emergency calls of which 73 were fire related and 116 were emergency medical calls. Of the fire calls 25 were in the Town of Calais, 31 in East Montpelier, and 17 were mutual aid calls to surrounding towns. For more statistics and information stop by our booth at town meeting. Just as a side note, as of January 26 the fire department has responded to over two dozen calls.

At town meeting the fire department will be asking the towns of East Montpelier and

THE TOWN WEATHERVANE

If you should have any questions regarding the above request or in what is in the town report, please feel free to contact any fire department member.

FOUR CORNERS SCHOOLHOUSE

Ginny Burley, Ruth Frost, Co-Chairs

The vestibule has been renovated and insulated, using funds not expended from the grant received in 1995. In November we contracted for restoration/renovations in the kitchen area and furnace room door.

Recently we received a matching grant for work in the stage area. The duct work and wallboard from the old furnace will be removed. Stage drapery, stage window shade and lighting will be installed.

Exterior painting of the schoolhouse will take place this spring. Any funds unexpended from the 1995 town funds will be applied to this renovation work.

George Landry, Jr. has resigned as a director. We thank him for his work and donations on behalf of Four Corners Schoolhouse.

Four Corners plans to sponsor the following activities this spring: basketry, chair caning, bird/wildflower hike, using your sewing machine with confidence, and design and planting of gardens. Call Ruth Frost to register and/or for details.

RECREATION BOARD

Pat Fitzsimmons, Rachel Senechal, Co-Chairs

One of the most exciting developments for the Recreation Board is the possible use of 13 acres located behind the recreation field next to the Elementary School for expanded recreational opportunities. Some of the ideas for the use of this space include another soccer field, community swimming pool, picnic area, walking trails, tennis court, skating rink with warming hut, enhanced parking area and electricity. We encourage residents to give us their ideas for use of this space. The prospect of Community Block Grant Development funds coming to East Montpelier is truly exciting. Some of our recreation goals could be met with financial support from the CBGD funds. The Recreation Board will be discussing various fund raising ideas and evaluating the Wedgewood Swimming Program at its next board meeting. Come and join us!

TRAILS COMMITTEE

Nona Estrin, Sandy Woodbeck, Co-chairs

East
Montpelier
Trail

Three notes
from the Trails
Committee:

1) We will open the first local section of the Cross Vermont Trail on National Trails Day, June 1st! Cross Vermont Trails, the East Montpelier Trails Committee, and the city of Montpelier will dedicate this section of the trail with a Gala Celebration. The Celebration will be near Agway, at the foot of Gallison Hill Road. It will be a big deal, with prizes, food, and general Hoopla. Mark your calendar, now, and stay tuned!

2) MUD Warning and Reminder: Please stay off our trails with bikes and horses during mud season. With thaws unpredictable, and little snow cover, trails are very vulnerable. NO bicycle or horse use until June 1st, and after that, don't use if muddy. Thanks!

3) Grant Money! We have received a small grant from the Fields, Streams Fndn. of Massachusetts for trail work. We'll apply this grant to the new Sparrow Farm Trail, and will work on the trail this summer. Anyone who wants to help with trail construction this summer, give us a shout. And finally, thanks to the notice in the last Signpost, Erica Zimmerman has volunteered to be our Grants Coordinator. Thank you, Erica!

TOWN MEETING POTLUCK:

Last year we all shared potluck lunch at Town Meeting. It was such fun that we are going to try it again. We hope that lots of people will partake. Here's what you should do:

- Bring a hot dish or salad or breadstuff or dessert. If you are alone, your dish should serve four. If your family of four plans to eat, your food should serve 16. This rule of thumb assures that there will be plenty for all.
- Bring your food to the cafeteria window where it will be exchanged for a ticket showing the number of people in your family who will eat with us.
- If you absolutely can't bring food, call 223-2951 and plan to eat with us anyway. Your ticket will cost $3.00, which helps pay for butter, coffee, milk, etc. Share and enjoy!

BILL SMITH, MAPLE SYRUP MAKER

We were to have met on a Saturday morning for coffee at the Maple Valley Cafe in Plainfield. I would ask the questions and take notes for this article while Bill would oblige by talking about his maple sugaring business. That's the way it should have gone, but when Bill got called at 6:00 a.m. to fight an East Montpelier fire in sub-zero temperature, his priorities for that day changed.

Later that same morning, Bill warmed up to our project over a cup of much-deserved coffee. Before too long, a picture of Bill emerged as a man of action—independent, resourceful, a compassionate and thoughtful family man for whom the annual ritual of making maple syrup is only one of several callings.

As a young man, Bill answered the call to help on the family dairy farm. He traces his love of the woods, especially when the sap is running, from those years when he and his father, Walter Smith, collected sap the old fashioned way—with a team of oxen.

Opportunity to make better money in auto mechanics called Bill away from the farm to jobs in Connecticut and Massachusetts. When he returned to help run the family farm in 1978, the herd had grown and the farm's land holdings had grown to include a sugarbush of some 40 acres. For dairy farmers statewide, the production of maple syrup was becoming a business.

After a few years of working side-by-side with his father and the legendary farmhand-poet "Miff" Keene, Bill started caring for those who have been dealt a poor hand in life. Bill and his wife Valerie purchased a home and 155 acres adjacent to the old Smith farm. Bill and Valerie became licensed foster home parents and are registered Professional Parents for Washington County Mental Health.

About ten years after Bill's return to Vermont, Walter Smith began planning his retirement from farming. So deep was Walter's love of the land that he felt the right thing to do was to gift the development rights on the family farm to the Central Vermont Land Trust. He converted his own house to congregate living for himself and others whose needs could be met best by living communally. By prior arrangement, seven building lots were reserved for Bill's children, should any want to live on the old homestead in the future. One daughter and her husband have taken the option to do so and have recently moved into the new home they built last summer.

Today the source of Bill Smith's syrup is the same 40 acre sugarbush, but it's now protected from further development by covenant with the Central Vermont Land Trust. This stand of trees is a joy to behold in any season of the year.

Normally Bill will make about 400 gallons of syrup, bringing in enough profit to pay his taxes and insurance. In an unusually good year he makes about 600 gallons. However, if one applies strict accounting principles, the "profit" evaporates like the sap in the sugarhouse. Figure on amortizing $10,000 worth of new equipment bought five years ago and a new sugarhouse built last summer. Don't forget to count the long hours of labor in transporting sap to the sugar house, putting wood to the fire for evaporation, tasting and testing the product, grading and canning the syrup.

And then comes the marketing. Every Saturday during the summer Bill sells his maple syrup from the tailgate of his truck at the Montpelier farmer's market. He also does a small amount of mail order business from his home, as well. His wholesale markets are Hunger Mountain Co-op and the Plainfield Co-op.

Quality maple syrup, Bill will tell you, is the result of combining nature's bounty and human know-how. Minerals in the soil on which his trees grow and the slope's eastern exposure contribute to good taste. Beyond that, there's careful attention to detail: flushing out the pipelines with sanitizer after the sap stops flowing; moving spouts around the tree to prevent damage to the tree; tasting and testing the new sap for impurities; culling the weak and storm-damaged trees to use for firewood; storing new syrup in plastic drums to preserve taste.

Bill puts all of his talents to use almost everyday, interweaving the making and marketing of maple syrup with professional parenting, and working part-time as a self-employed auto mechanic out of his well-equipped garage at his home. Still, he reserves time for himself. As a Vermonter, Bill answers one other call that's bred in the bone: deer hunting. Bill and this writer share a boundary line—to which the local deer pay no attention—a metaphor for the way Bill lives his life: man and nature working together harmoniously. Good neighbors—whether man or beast—don't need fences.
